Global Mining News:

Indonesia revokes nickel ore mining permits in Raja Ampat after protest

Indonesia's energy minister has revoked permits for four mining firms in the Raja Ampat Geopark after public outcry. The companies failed to meet administrative requirements and were not granted production quotas. Their operations raised concerns over deforestation and environmental damage in the protected area. Greenpeace claims over 500 hectares of forest were destroyed by mining activity. One company, PT Gag Nikel, was not affected as it operates outside the geopark.

Gold rally brings riches to rural Zimbabwe

A surge in gold prices has boosted incomes for Zimbabwe's 700,000 informal miners, offering relief to its struggling economy. Gold deliveries to the state refinery nearly doubled in five months, raising export income significantly. At the current pace, Zimbabwe could earn $1 billion more from gold exports this year than in 2024. Across Africa, countries like Ghana and Ethiopia are also benefiting from small-scale gold mining. However, in places like eastern Congo, rebel groups exploit the boom, forcing civilians into mining.
